

- Mildred Minbar: My name is Mildred Kinbar, but most people call me Millie and I'm 95. Hammond Glen was a place for me to go, but I had no idea how I would respond to it. And I do welcome it fully now. The people are friendly, the help is certainly friendly [00:00:30] or outgoing. And so, we're really very compassionate toward one another, just to be together and it's important. And that's the way you develop the friendships.
- Susan Sandman: I'm the youngest of my siblings and all of us all live in different parts of the United States. My mother was living in Daytona Beach. We worried about her a lot being down there by herself. And have been asking her and encouraging her to try to move here [00:01:00] for a while. And my thinking at the time was if I could just get her to go in, it might get her a little bit more interested. And we did. And she was interested. At the age of 95, she is living in an apartment with all of her things and has come across as being a place that's been very welcoming and that she has found a place for herself.
- Luis Serrano: Our mission is to provide the seniors in our community with a safe and happy place to call home. [00:01:30] We strive to provide a quality environment for them, where they can succeed in making friends and becoming part of our family.
- Stephen Eatman: When residents come to us, it's typically because something in their life is challenging them holding on to their independence. So, what we try to do is offer amenities that allow them to keep their independence, but make their lifestyle a lot easier. So, that's our all day dining program. That's our 24 hour dedicated staff, transportation, all these other things [00:02:00] that are going to help them keep their independence longer.
- Luis Serrano: The attributes that better define us are people, passion and excellence. People because our staff is what makes the biggest difference in the life of our residents. The passion and dedication that they exhibit every day on a daily basis with our residents is unmatched. An excellence that's the criteria that we have to provide all our services, all the things that make the residents happy. And feeling among family, in our [00:02:30] community.
- Susan Sandman: It's incredibly important for my mom to have her independence here in her senior years. There's a strong sense that you can make that transition and find a new community around you.
- Mildred Minbar: It's my life and it's around me. And this is what I love. It's just one big smile.
